The Noel Rademacher-Homer Memorial Scholarship was established in 2026 in loving memory of Noel Rademacher-Homer (1976-2025), whose life embodied generosity, strength, and compassion for others. This award honors women graduating from Lewis & Clark High School who, despite facing hardship and limited resources, have demonstrated extraordinary resilience in the face of adversity — and who have shown a deep commitment to lifting up those around them.

Each year, this scholarship recognizes a young woman who carries forward Noel's spirit: one who has not only persevered through her own challenges, but who has reached out a hand to serve, support, or advocate for others in meaningful ways. It is awarded to those who remind us that strength and generosity can flourish even in the most difficult of circumstances.

As part of the application process, candidates are asked to share a personal example of a time they faced and overcame a significant hardship — and to describe a specific instance in which they stepped forward to help someone in need. These stories need not be grand; what matters is their truth, and the character they reveal.

In honoring Noel's memory, this scholarship seeks to open doors for young women whose potential is boundless — and whose hearts are already making the world a better place.
